When all we want is something short - Libby has magazines

Sometimes we aren’t in the mood for complexity and we want to read something quickly from start to finish. We want to read about birds or knitting or cooking or sports – something entertaining that isn’t all that much brain work. We want, in other words, a magazine.

Since at times the library moves faster than we do with how to easily access what we want, it’s time to take a look at how we download magazines now.

First, make sure you have the following:
1) Your new Libary card. All of us now begin with 2-8323-0000 and then your old library card five-digit number. You need to use the new 14-digit number with your old card number. If you have a Libby app when you had your old library card, just enter your new information into the app.
2) Your four-digit password for your new card. The old password you used does (automatically) migrate to your new card. Just stop in or call and any librarian can enter your chosen password in the system.

FYI, the Libby app is the fastest, easiest way to download e-books as part of the White Pine Collective with whom we share our digital collection. When I looked at Libby, it indicated that there are, at this moment, 3,451 magazines available for immediate download. That is beyond fabulous. But how do we know that we are downloading something we would like to read or at least read part of?

I went to the menu and chose “Home and Garden” as a general subject and “English” because I’d like to be able to read it and not just look at pictures. This took me from 3,451 magazines to 196. I started scrolling and relish on further exploration of a magazine called Backyard Decking. Perpetua & Patios. I had chosen to tag the magazine and could be here now and read a sample of it, or browse for more. It can also be read in the Libby app.

The sample is generous. I got 76 gorgeous full color pages. Magazines don’t typically display the entire table of contents, but they do on paper. Sure, they don’t smell (for better or worse) but they really look good! I choose one from them even better.

I could also read the entire table of contents giving me further indications whether I wanted to download this, as well as a general summary index to many articles.

And that’s how we go from 3,451 magazines to one. Even if all I wanted to read was a single magazine, I can browse pictures for ideas that’s good enough. We don’t have to “get our money’s worth” from a magazine because we aren’t spending any money. Just by clicking a glance at the sample showed me a decoration I could use in our guest room or in our guest bathroom, a fence design in one’s yard or dog owners shouldn’t get excited, but truly look good! I could also see things even better.

And when the magazine is due, it will return itself.

That’s how we get magazines now. Check them out! See you at the library.

UC professor wins international prize for work that led to COVID-19 vaccines

Frankenmuth native Philip Felgner almost chose Spanish classical science over world. He should be proud. He gets the buck’s antlers on the deer to the right. (News photo)

Prime Minister Felgner — director of University of California Irvine’s Vaccine Research and Development Center and Protein Microarray Laboratory and Training Facility, has won Spain’s Princess of Asturias Award in recognition of his contributions to the groundwork for the mRNA vaccines. Felgner’s findings led to the development of mRNA vaccines, which are used to deliver genetic material to the body to stimulate an immune response. Both the Pfizer-BioNTech and Moderna vaccines use mRNA technology, which allows the body to produce the protein that the vaccine is designed to target.

Felgner came to Irvine in 2002. “It was the 1980s, and the promise of gene therapy — using genetic material to treat a disease — had become a holy grail,” he said. “If liposomes were used to deliver genetic material directly to cells, they might also be good at carrying genes into cells.”

Yes, Felgner put DNA inside those liposomes and saw that the liposomes produced the protein that was encoded by the gene. He wanted to take the next step: gel therapy experiments in animals — and he’s never forgotten what his bosses said: “If gene therapy will be something for the year 2020.” It was only in 1987, and the company had to work on products that would help the bottom line in some foreseeable future. He soon left for San Diego and became director of product development at Vical Inc. Working with other researchers from UC San Diego, they were able to deliver DNA directly into cells using the newly created nanoparticles.

Then came another big step: Naked DNA without nanoparticles. Could it also be used as a mouse model tissue.” That was so simple, he said. “If you put your mouse model tissue into a well, you can do your experiments.” But in an animal, you could inject DNA in and get expression. “That’s because, when you inject into muscle, it can transport breaks in the machinery that allow the DNA to get in.”

Felgner’s findings led to the development of DNA vaccines, and Vical became “the DNA vaccine company.” It was the birth of the DNA vaccine company. “It was a starting point,” he said, “when it merged with Brickell Biotech in 2010 Companies

Michigan Wheat Program in partnership with MSU releases high-management results from the 2021 high-management Trials

The Michigan Wheat Program held the 96th consecutive year of high-management wheat trials this summer to see how various wheat varieties perform in high-management production practices.

Wheat farmers should consult the MSU Wheat Program to learn what varieties perform well across Michigan, and review the side-by-side comparisons of these varieties, under conventional and high-management approach, according to MSU wheat management specialist Dennis Pennington.

The Michigan Wheat Program released research plots for needy farmers located on open farms in Michigan – were harvested in late July. Results are available now on the Michigan Wheat Program website at wheat.msu.edu.

The report to learn more about high-management wheat trials.

For more than 30 years, the Michigan State University Wheat Program has conducted side-by-side research plots to help farmers make decisions about their competition in other states. The report was finalized this week.

This report is available now on the Michigan Wheat Program website at wheat.msu.edu.

Southwest Michigan's Wheat Program is part of the Michigan Wheat Program in partnership with MSU. The program studies various wheat varieties and the impact of high management to make the decision as to what is the best variety for his farm or her farm, said Dennis Pennington, MSU wheat specialist. The goal of this project is to provide a data tool for growers to consider to improve production and quality in their location.

Two ‘Performance Trials’ include 36 commercial wheat varieties, along with 12 varieties grown in the Michigan Wheat Program trial details, published under the Research and Policy group’s University of Michigan’s Extension Program.

These trial results will be a pool play format for large crowds, especially on Friday, Saturday, Tuesday through Saturday, August 16-14, welcoming some of the nation’s top polka bands to Frankenmuth. (News photos) many people welcomed the news that 529 plans can withdraw $32,000, according to the Federal Reserve. So, if you’ve heard of 529 plans, you might think they are technical, some states consider K-12 tuition to be nonqualified 529 plan expenses, which means the earnings portion of a 529 plan is subject to state income taxes and possibly a “recapture” of other state income tax breaks connected with 529 plan withdrawals. So, make sure you understand your state’s rules on K-12 expenses before taking money out of your 529 plan.

Apprenticeships - Not every child wants or needs to attend a college or university. And now, 529 funds can be used for apprenticeship programs registered with the U.S. Department of Labor. These types of programs, which combine on-the-job training with classroom instruction, are offered at community colleges and trade schools. Once students complete their apprenticeships, they often go on to well-paying careers in a variety of fields. And since these types of programs are typically far less expensive than a four-year college degree, a 529 plan can have a particularly long reach. The tax treatment of 529 plans for all these expenses can vary from state to state, so, if you move to another state after you’ve established your plan, you’ll want to know the rules. Even if you don’t move, it’s still a good idea to consult with your tax advisor about how 529 plan withdrawals will be treated.

Nevertheless, a 529 plan could be valuable to you and your family. And now, you might want to put it to work for you and your family.
