Dear Colleagues,

This message is sent on behalf of Diane O’Dowd, Vice Provost for Academic Personnel and Michelle Garfinkel, Chair of the Council on Academic Personnel.

Best wishes,

Georg Striedter, Chair
Academic Senate, Irvine Division

To: Senate Faculty

The Vice Provost for Academic Personnel and the Council on Academic Personnel (CAP) continue to recognize the significant impact of COVID-19 on the ability of faculty to perform all aspects of their work, including research, teaching and service, and disparate impacts of COVID-19 on women and underrepresented faculty, as well as on early-career faculty.

We strongly encourage faculty to document COVID-19 impacts on professional achievements in their self-statements (teaching, research, service and/or inclusive excellence, as may be relevant/appropriate). Following UCOP guidelines, faculty should title the paragraphs that discuss COVID-19 impacts as “COVID-19 Opportunities and Challenges.”

Faculty are expected to focus more on documenting the effects of the pandemic’s disruption to their work than on the causes. While faculty are not expected to provide personal details about difficult individual circumstances, the impact of these circumstances can be included. Some examples of the types of non-confidential information that might be provided are listed below:

- Changes in teaching workload relative to department or school norms, or teaching overloads undertaken due to impacts on other faculty;
- Negative impacts due to diminished available resources (e.g., lack of lab equipment, course software, or TA support);
- Additional efforts required for student advising and mentoring beyond the regular expectations (e.g., support provided for emotional or mental health, or economic and social issues);
- Contributions to initiatives for mitigating the impact of the pandemic, both within one’s own discipline and in the community at large;
- Lost opportunities for scholarly and professional recognition both on campus and professionally, including invited lectures, plenary sessions at meetings, etc.;
- Additional work required to maintain operation of research labs or other facilities, including implementation of disinfection and distancing protocols;
• Loss of specific scholarly activity or funding opportunities (e.g., performances, fellowships, sabbaticals, field trials, collaborations) due to restricted travel, closed facilities, lack of access to research subjects, or other pandemic-induced influences;
• Constraints on time to devote to research due to significantly increased caregiving responsibilities or health issues;
• Delays due to increased time required for reviews and publication of books and articles;
• Presentations/activities scheduled but cancelled due to COVID-19 (please note “cancelled due to COVID-19” on AP-10/CV).

Information faculty provide in the “COVID-19 Opportunities and Challenges” sections in one or more of the four self-statements (research, teaching, service, and/or inclusive excellence) will be critical in enabling all levels of review (including the department, school, and CAP) to conduct an equitable evaluation of merit and promotion cases that takes into account COVID-19 impacts.

Guidance on documenting COVID-19 impacts in merit and promotion files may be found on the Academic Personnel website.

Sincerely,

Diane K. O'Dowd
Vice Provost for Academic Personnel

Michelle R. Garfinkel
Chair, Council on Academic Personnel