RACE
the power of an illusion

“This eye-opening look at why race is not biologically meaningful yet nonetheless very real needs to be seen by all scientists — and the general public.”

—Donald Kennedy, editor-in-chief, SCIENCE former president, Stanford University

SOME FOUNDATIONAL IDEAS

- Race as a social and historical construction
  - “One is not born, but rather becomes, a woman”
    - Simone de Beauvoir
  - “They had been forged in trauma. They had been made Black by those who believe themselves to be white. And where they were headed, black equals slave.”
    - 1619 Project, New York Times
INSTITUTIONAL AND STRUCTURAL RACISM

- Baking Race into the U.S.
  - Founding ideas do not apply to all
- Structural racism is defined as the macrolevel systems, social forces, institutions, ideologies, and processes that interact with one another to generate and reinforce inequities among racial and ethnic groups
- The metaphor of an iceberg is useful for describing the levels at which racism operates (Gee et al., 2009). The tip of the iceberg represents acts of racism, such as cross-burnings, that are easily seen and individually mediated. The portion of the iceberg that lies below the water represents structural racism; it is more dangerous and harder to eliminate. Policies and interventions that change the iceberg’s tip may do little to change its base, resulting in structural inequalities that remain intact, though less detectable.
WHAT DOES HISTORY HAVE TO DO WITH THE PRESENT?

- The era of slavery was when white Americans determined that black Americans needed only the bare necessities, not enough to keep them optimally safe and healthy. It set in motion black people’s diminished access to healthy foods, safe working conditions, medical treatment and a host of other social inequities that negatively impact health.

HOW DOES STRUCTURAL RACISM OPERATE WITHIN THE ACADEMY?

AND, WHAT DO WE DO ABOUT IT?
