The UTD Office of Financial Aid awards Federal Work-Study (FWS) as part of your financial aid package when you complete your FAFSA each academic year. The Student Employment Team manages your experience after you accept your FWS funds. Once you accept, you’ll need to secure a job to earn those funds – which means that you’ll never have to repay it! Your FWS Award is an amount you work towards, not a grant, scholarship, or tuition credit that kicks in at all once.

In general, any on-campus job qualifies for earning your FWS funds and you can also work off-campus at one of our approved affiliate organizations. The work hours you log in these positions will be paid out to you via a paycheck - either direct deposit to your bank account or by a physical check, if you choose.

Benefits

- Exclusive access to FWS job postings by affiliated off-campus agencies and select on-campus departments, more than 25% of hourly student jobs are FWS-only each year
- The dollars you earn will not be counted as income for your financial aid eligibility determination next year
- You will get on-the-job experience that will give you an edge in the job market after graduation
- Working with professionals will provide you with valuable references for your future post-graduate careers
- Your wages will be partially subsidized, making you even more attractive to employers than you already are

Frequently Asked Questions

Where do I start?
Consider your priorities before you begin your job search. What are your maximum FWS funds for the year? How many hours can you reasonably work? What types of jobs are you interested in? What experiences and skills do you hope to gain from your employment?

How do I apply to FWS jobs?
All job listings are accessible online through Handshake, our job listings database. You can find FWS jobs by using the “on-campus” or “work-study” filter. You will automatically receive a Handshake account once you are registered for courses.

What if I earn my entire FWS award amount?
Once you reach your award maximum, you can request an increase from Financial Aid or talk to your employer about a continuity plan. You can also reach out to workstudy@utdallas.edu and we’ll facilitate these conversations on your behalf.

What if I have more questions?
We’re always happy to discuss the intricacies of FWS with you directly. You can schedule a Federal Work Study Overview Appointment or send questions by email to workstudy@utdallas.edu.
