Program Description
With its emphasis on both practical and theoretical knowledge—and the skillsets and expertise that all future finance professionals must have—the Master of Science in Finance graduate program introduces students to core concepts used widely across all finance specializations and to preeminent faculty experts and industry leaders.

Offered by the Naveen Jindal School of Management at UT Dallas—one of the nation’s top ranked business schools according to U.S. News and World Report—the master’s program in Finance helps students develop:

- An in-depth understanding of finance, from its theoretical and technical aspects to its practical applications.
- The ability to make strategic financial decisions using appropriate data and models.
- The skills to analyze and scrutinize financial information in order to make sound, forward-looking financial decisions.
- A knowledge of technologies that enhance data analysis and strategic financial decision making.
- Expertise in written and oral communication and experience with leadership opportunities.

The Finance master’s program has numerous program partners across the School of Management and is uniquely situated to provide students with the skills they need to succeed in the master’s program and beyond. The program is designed for students with or without a previous educational background in finance and no prior work experience is required.

The MS Finance Cohort Program: The purpose of this special program is to develop effective leaders in professional finance by adopting a holistic approach that focuses on knowledge of finance as well as communication and leadership skills. The program is designed for students with or without a previous educational background in finance and makes it possible for students to complete all degree requirements in 12 months. No prior work experience is required, and admission to the program occurs only in the summer semester. Visit the websites below for additional information.

Benefits
The Finance master’s program ensures that students gain a broad understanding of their discipline, apply their knowledge and analytical skills to create effective and novel solutions to practical problems and communicate and work effectively in collaborative environments.

Other benefits include:
